Karlsson a 'very happy guy' after Sens name him captain

Leading the team.
GM says superstar defenceman, 'the right guy'

TREVOR GREENWAY
trevor.greenway@metronews.ca

Superstar defenceman Erik Karlsson said he is a "very, very happy guy" after the Ottawa Senators named him as captain for the upcoming season Thursday.

The Swedish-born player follows former captain Jason Spezza, who was dealt to the Dallas Stars this summer.

While Spezza had difficulty dealing with the pressure of being captain and felt fingers were pointed at him when the team didn't make the playoffs last year, Karlsson said he is up to the challenge, but doesn't feel like he needs to carry the team on his shoulders.

"With the group we have, we have a great leader group," he said, referring to gsuch teammates as Chris Phillips, Chris Neil, Bobby Ryan and Clarke McArthur.

"It's not only going to be on me, I think we are going to help each other as much as we can. Obviously, I am going to have to do certain things and I am going to take the responsibility that is given to me and I am going to embrace it, but I think if we are going to be able to do this, it's going to be as a team and you are going to need help."

It's the third captain in as many seasons for the Senators after long-time captain Daniel Alfredsson left to Detroit in 2013, but Senators GM Bryan Murray told reporters at the Canadian Tire Centre Thursday that he believes Karlsson is the guy who will lead the team for years to come.

"We just felt he was the right guy, because he had that personality to step up and take charge and be forceful, but considerate of his teammates," said Murray.

"I think (factors are) his growth off the ice, too, his attitude, the conversations we have had since last year, the fact that he is back to full health and really wanting to be a focal teammate of this hockey team."

Officer took his own life. Police, friends and family pay respects to Staff Sgt. Kal Ghadban at funeral service

trevor.greenway@metronews.ca

Hundreds of mourners gathered at an Ottawa mosque Thursday to bid a final farewell to Staff Sgt. Kal Ghadban — the Ottawa police officer who took his own life earlier this week.

Friends and family are left searching for answers, as they try to come to grips with the loss of the dedicated husband, father of three and community leader.

"It doesn't make sense," said cousin Isaaf Ghaday, wiping tears from her eyes outside of the Ottawa Mosque Thursday, as prayers echoed from inside. "I am going to miss everything about him. He was very loving, very outgoing. He loves his family. He reached out to a lot of people to help them. He had a very loving, caring nature about him."

Scores of officers on motorbikes and in cruisers escorted Ghadban's body to the Sacred Space of the Beechwood National Memorial Centre in Vanier where hundreds of others were gathering to pay their final respects. Cops had a black band across their badges to honour their fallen comrade.

Ottawa police Insp. Paul Johnston said the entire force is still in shock over Ghadban's sudden death Sunday, adding that the tragedy is a "wake-up call" for all police. He said Ghadban was one of the best police officers on the force, someone who "gave his life to the community."

"We are in shock, we are in disbelief," said Johnston. "We never saw this coming and that's a wake-up call for us that we need to take care of ourselves. It's a very, very stressful job we deal with and, as you can see, anybody can be vulnerable to what can happen ... For us, we are just asking ourselves, 'What did we miss?'"

Police are creating a memorial fund for Ghadban's family.

Ghadban was the 23rd first responder in Canada to take his own life since April 29, and the fifth first-responder suicide in September alone.

Ontario's Special Investigations Unit is investigating.

Council candidate backs weekly trash pickup in summer months

Less frequent garbage pickup. Tougher and stinkier in city core, candidate says

LUCY SCHOLEY
lucy.scholey@metronews.ca

Another Ottawa council candidate is jumping on board Marianne Wilkinson's plan to bring back weekly garbage pickup in the summertime.

Lili V. Weemen, who's running in Somerset, said the Kanata North incumbent is right about bringing back weekly garbage pickup in the summer months, when the hot weather stinks up the curbside trash.

When council voted in 2011 against having garbage picked up weekly in the summer staff told them it would cost an extra $3 million.

At the time, council was told having weekly summer garbage pickup would cost an extra $3 million.

"In the suburbs, it's different, because people aren't living close together," Weemen said. "But when you're downtown, the smell is there. Your neighbour is close to you. You're either in a high-rise building or in smaller lots."

Weemen is responding to remarks the Kanata North incumbent made on Wednesday about bringing back weekly garbage pickup as a way to teach residents how to use their green bins.

Weemen said that every two weeks, she takes photos of the garbage piles in her ward.

When asked how much a switch back to weekly pickup might cost the city, she said "the money was there" prior to the switch biweekly switch.

"There's a limit to being frugal. You have to be smart and frugal, not frugal just for the sake of being frugal," she said.

Ottawa Mayor Jim Watson does not support the idea. On Wednesday, he said he sees more candidates using their green bins now than he did four years ago.

Somerset ward candidate Lili V. Weemen says she wants to see weekly garbage pickup in the summer. CONTRIBUTED

Liquor laws shut out second spot for microbrewery

A new Hintonburg brewery called Beyond the Pale is set to open in 1,000 square feet of old storage space this September. TOURISM VICTORIA

The owner of a Hintonburg microbrewery wants to expand his ale-making facilities into an additional location, but says provincial liquor laws are preventing him from brewing and selling out of two spots.

Rob McIsaac, owner of Beyond the Pale, said he's moving his facilities from 5 Hamilton Ave. to 250 City Centre Ave. He wanted to keep the original Hintonburg location, but he does not brew enough ale, according to Ontario law.

McIsaac said he needs to brew at least 2.5 million litres of ale a year in order to both make and sell from more than one venue. But his facility brews just 200,000 litres.

"We need to be able to make more beer," he said. "We're totally capped out in the space that we have here."

For the past two years, Beyond the Ale has produced beer at its current 2,000-square-foot location in Hintonburg. The new facility — about two km away — is 10,000-square-feet. Even with a second location, Beyond the Pale would initially only brew double what they do now — still far below the 2.5-million-litres mark.

McIsaac wants to keep his original location open for accessibility reasons.

"The retail business has been great here. The community was incredibly welcoming to us," he said. "People like to come in and taste the beer, talk about beer. I think there's something to be lost by leaving. But, also, from a practical standpoint, it's nice to have the ability to sell it at two spots."

Beyond the Pale is due to open at City Centre in early 2015. LUCY SCHOLEY/METRO

Uber launched its UberX app this week, leading the city to threaten to send out undercover bylaw officers to fine drivers and the firm. The city's stance has one driver reconsidering whether to continue offering his services. LUCY SCHOLEY/METRO

UberX driver not so sure about new job

Ridesharing. Drivers could face fines as city threatens police sting operations on new service in the city

LUCY SCHOLEY
lucy.scholey@metronews.ca

At least one Ottawa UberX driver is thinking twice about his new job, after city officials threatened to conduct police sting operations on the tech company.

Brian, a 26-year-old who didn't want his last name used, said he signed up as a driver with Uber because it allows him to work flexible hours while he studies to become a real estate broker.

But after city officials said Uber drivers could face fines, Brian said he may not drive past the first-10-rides-free period, which runs until Sunday.

"I'll just stay low a bit after this weekend," he said, after picking me up on Slater Street in a Honda Civic on Thursday afternoon. It was the day after Uber Technologies launched its rideshare app in the capital.

The app connects passengers to its drivers — people who pick you up in their cars for a fee. What Brian's doing now is not illegal, but it will be once he starts collecting money through passengers' credit card charges to the app.

I had hesitations about getting into a car with a stranger — and what's essentially an unlicensed cab driver, although Uber maintains it does background checks — but Brian was very polite, chatty and his car was immaculately clean for a 2009 model. Previous passengers had given him a five-out-of-five rating.

Given that he's unlicensed, he has his safety concerns, too.

"If I'm at the bar area and some drunk person gets on, I'm a little wary about that, but it's been OK so far," he said. "I haven't had, really, an experience where I'm afraid for my safety on the road."

Before getting in the car, I had already requested a ride to a coffee shop less than two kilometres away. Although this ride was free, a fee estimate netted the cost at $6-$7. A regular cab ride to the same spot cost $7.77 — so not a huge difference. But Uber's costs rise and fall, depending on demand.

And demand was high that day. When I first tried electronically hailing a ride on Uber at around 12:20 p.m., there was none available. I tried again about an hour later and it took only five minutes for Brian to show up.

After I grabbed a drink at the coffee shop, I requested an Uber ride back to Slater Street. But the app told me it would take about 30 minutes for a car from Nepean to show up. I walked instead.

Brian scored a four out of five. Uber? Undecided.

What's the city's problem?

The city says a firm like Uber should be registered as a taxi brokerage with the city. Officially sanctioned taxi drivers need to take a course and be approved as cabbies by the city and they need to work for a registered brokerage. Their vehicles need to be inspected by the province and the city and have a taxi plate. Without any of those things, a driver is operating a "bandit cab," according to the city.

Federal politics

Wynne: Liberals would support pension reform

Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne says she believes if the federal Liberals win next year's election, they would be "supportive" of her pension reform efforts.

The Liberal premier has been critical of the Conservative government on that score, saying today in a speech in Ottawa that it is "punting on its obligation to help Canadians prepare for retirement."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper, in turn, has panned Wynne's bid to create a made-in-Ontario pension plan, saying people prefer tax breaks as a reward for saving for retirement, rather than having their taxes hiked to force them to save.

Van causes chaos at Tim Hortons

A man is in custody after Toronto police say he drove a van erratically in a Tim Hortons parking lot before slamming into a building.

Police say the driver hit a car, taking off its mirror, before pulling into the Tim Hortons drive-thru.

It's alleged that when the van's driver was confronted by the driver of the car while waiting at the drive-thru window, he tried to drive away, striking two more vehicles.

The van then jumped a curb and struck a pole before hitting a building and stopping.

Paramedics say the 53-year-old van driver was rushed to hospital with serious injuries to his face and chest.

Teen pimp ringleader 'high risk' to reoffend, psychiatrist testifies

Troubled past. Teen shows narcissistic and sociopathic traits, Crown argues in court

JOE LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

The 18-year-old ringleader of a teen prostitution ring in Ottawa exhibited narcissistic and sociopathic traits and is at a high risk to reoffend, a Crown prosecutor said at her sentencing hearing.

Crown attorney Fara Rupert brought Dr. Gregory Motayne, from The Royal Mental Health Centre, to testify Thursday and share insight into the young woman's troubled past and why, at 15, she would be motivated to orchestrate a complex network of johns and force young victims to perform sex acts for money.

The Crown wants the judge to sentence her as an adult and for the young woman to serve three years in prison, on top of the two years she has already served.

A youth sentence served out of custody, "is not sufficient to hold her accountable," argued Rupert.

Motayne said he diagnosed the young woman with conduct disorder and that she is at "high risk for future serious violence."

Her violent history started as early as Grade 1, he said. In grades 5 and 6, he said she bullied a classmate to the point where the victim contemplated suicide.

When she was eight, she and her older sister sexually assaulted a five-year-old boy.

No charges were laid due to their age, but the Children's Aid Society became involved with the family after the incident. The young woman also started to abuse alcohol at 12 and marijuana at 14, both of which were part of her life leading to her June 2012 arrest.

She was convicted in January of human trafficking, sexual assault, making and possessing child pornography, and several other charges.

The court heard at trial she used violence to force or attempt to force girls as young as 13 into prostitution.

Although cognitive behaviour therapy is what is recommended to treat people diagnosed with conduct disorder, Motayne warned recovery doesn't happen quickly.

"If you can think that it took 15 years to get here," he said, "it's going to take more than 16 weeks to change her."

Defence lawyers are expected to make submissions on sentencing on Monday.

SkyHawks owner files $1.78M suit against NBL

Basketball. Bytown Sports group claims breach of agreements, harm to reputation

LUCY SCHOLEY
lucy.scholey@metronews.ca

The owner of the Ottawa SkyHawks basketball team has filed a $1.78-million lawsuit against the National Basketball League of Canada.

Gus Takkale's Bytown Sports & Entertainment Inc. filed the suit two months after the NBL booted the capital's basketball team from the league.

According to court documents, the Bytown Sports group is claiming damages for "breach of operating agreements, confidentiality agreement, bad faith, unlawful interference with economic relations" and "irreparable harm to business reputation."

The NBL had claimed that Takkale owed $75,000 to three other team owners who helped advance partial funds to the capital team.

A loan agreement between the Bytown Sports group and the NBL had not been finalized, the documents allege, but the NBL still accused Takkale of a "breach of signed promissory note."

The NBL kicked the team out of the league on July 30, 2014.

The SkyHawks had almost as rocky a start as they did a finish. The team was initially named the "TomaHawks" but changed the moniker following public and media outrage over the appropriation of a First Nations cultural symbol.

The Bytown Sports group allegedly spent $780,000 to launch the SkyHawks' first season, in addition to $300,000 on shares to the NBL.

None of these allegations have been proven in court.

Can-Con 'all about the networking'

About 300 lovers and creators of science fiction will gather this weekend at the Sheraton Hotel in Ottawa for Can-Con 2014.

Unlike the Ottawa Comiccon, Can-Con is focused more on literature than on movies and comic books, says one of its organizers and special guests, Destiny author Marie Bilodeau.

"It won't have as much cosplay as Comiccon," says Bilodeau, who adds that the author panels, publisher pitch sessions and workshops hold a greater appeal for people who like to "discus science fiction, create it or who aspire to do so."

Parties put on by attendees, an annual paper airplane contest and networking are among the activities Bilodeau says she enjoys most at the convention.

JOHN W. MACDONALD/CONTRIBUTED

"It's all about the networking opportunities," she says.

Re-started in 2010 after a hiatus, the convention always boasts a number of high-profile authors and creators. This year's special guests will include Montreal sci-fi author Jo Walton and Jay Odjick, who will speak about Kagagi, his new animated TV series about an aboriginal teen superhero, airing on APTN.

The convention runs from Oct 3 to 5. Tickets are available at the door at 150 Albert St.

Justify combat role: Trudeau to Harper

War in Iraq. Previous prime ministers have built a non-partisan case for wars, but not Harper, says the Liberal leader

Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau following a Canada2020 event in Ottawa on Thursday. SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is playing political games with the lives of Canadian soldiers as he prepares to send them to war against Islamic extremists in Iraq, Justin Trudeau charged Thursday.

The Liberal leader said Harper has made no attempt to justify a combat mission or to foster an all-party consensus on the issue.

Indeed, Trudeau said the prime minister seems to relish casting himself as the lone tough guy among federal leaders.

"Unlike prime ministers for decades before him, Mr. Harper has made no effort to build a non-partisan case for war," Trudeau told a conference hosted by Canada2020, a progressive think-tank.

"Instead, he dares us to oppose his war, staking out not moral territory, but political territory."

Trudeau said he hasn't yet decided whether Liberals will support a combat mission, but made it clear his inclination is to have Canada stick to a non-combat role in the U.S.-led fight against the militant ISIS group (a.k.a. ISIL).

"Why aren't we talking more about the kind of humanitarian aid that Canada can and must be engaged in, rather than trying to whip out our CF-18s and show them how big they are? It just doesn't work like that in Canada."

Harper is expected to announce Friday that Canada will deploy CF-18 fighter jets to take part in airstrikes against the militants in Iraq.

Conservatives struck back at Trudeau's comments.

"Our involvement in the fight against ISIL is, and has been, motivated by a desire to do our part in fighting a group that has made direct terrorist threats against Canada and Canadians, in addition to carrying out atrocities against children, women, and men in the region. As the prime minister has said, we take that seriously and will do our part," said Jason MacDonald, the PM's spokesman.

Killing of Jun Lin. Video testimony heard in the trial of Luka Magnotta

The Montreal building where Luka Rocco Magnotta lived in a $490-a-month bachelor apartment was equipped with surveillance cameras.

The jury at Magnotta's first-degree murder trial has heard audio testimony from a now-deceased witness who rented him the apartment. Eric Schorer said the building had four cameras — three with various views of the ground floor and entrance and one in the basement. He never showed Magnotta their existence.

Schorer said the building janitor reported seeing a suitcase outside that contained a torso five days after friends last saw the victim Jun Lin. While Magnotta admits to causing the acts he's accused of in Lin's death, his lawyer has said his client suffers from schizophrenia and borderline personality disorder. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Surrey. Two B.C. men guilty of murder and conspiracy in six deaths

Two men accused in the gang slayings of six people in a Surrey, B.C., apartment have been found guilty of first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder in connection with the deaths.

B.C. Supreme Court Judge Catherine Wedge says Cody Haevischer and Matthew Johnston played key roles in the execution-style killings of defenceless victims.

On Oct. 19, 2007, Haevischer, Johnston and an associate who can only be identified as Person X entered the suite of Corey Lal. The trial heard they'd been sent there by gang leadership to kill a rival drug dealer.

The trial took a year and heard from 73 witnesses.

The witness list included a gang leader who admitted to ordering the hit, as well as several former gangsters involved. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ohio woman sues clinic over sperm donor error

'How could they make a mistake?'
Chicago-area sperm bank inseminated lesbian couple with a sample from the wrong man: Lawsuit

A woman has sued a Chicago-area sperm bank after she became pregnant with sperm donated by a black man instead of a white man as she and her partner had intended.

Within days of her wedding to Amanda Zinkon in New York, Jennifer Cramblett became pregnant with the donor sperm.

However in April 2012 when Cramblett — then five months pregnant — called Midwest Sperm Bank LLC near Chicago to reserve the same sperm for Zinkon in hopes she, too, would one day also have a child, she was told by an employee, according to a lawsuit filed Monday, that she had been inseminated with sperm from the wrong donor.

"How could they make a mistake that was so personal?" Cramblett said during a telephone interview on Wednesday.

According to the lawsuit, her excitement about the pending birth was replaced with anger, disappointment and fear.

"They took a personal choice, a personal decision and took it on themselves to make that choice for us out of pure negligence," Cramblett said.

A woman who answered the phone at Midwest Sperm Bank declined to comment and said an attorney would provide an official statement.

Cramblett said that she and Zinkon love their daughter Payton, 2, and would not change a thing about her. Yet they worry about her being brought up in a predominantly white community — Uniontown, Ohio, where they had moved due to the quality of the education system — feeling she may be mistreated due to her skin colour.

Cramblett said her reason for filing the suit — which seeks a minumum of $50,000 in damages — is to ensure it doesn't happen to another couple. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Animal cruelty

Four charged in chicken killings

Deputies in central California have arrested four people — one adult and three juveniles — suspected of breaking into a Foster Farms chicken ranch and killing more than 900 birds.

Fresno County sheriff's officials acting on several tips Wednesday tracked down 18-year-old Gabriel Quintero of Riverdale. Also taken into custody were two male juveniles, ages 15 and 17, from Caruthers, and a third male juvenile, age 17, from Lemoore. All have been charged with burglary and felony cruelty to animals.

Investigators say the suspects pulled back a fence Sept. 20 to gain access to a shed south of Fresno and massacred 920 chickens with a golf club.

Need any body bags, honey?

The Dutch government is selling off 2,500 body bags in an online auction.

Rob Meijer, commercial director of BVA Auctions, said Thursday his company sells plenty of strange stuff, but this one is special.

Meijer says there hasn't been a great deal of interest — except from the media — in the unusual offer. The bags are being sold in a single lot, which has a minimum price of 4,000 euros. The auction closes on Oct. 6.

He thinks an organization like a relief agency could be interested in buying the bags.

The bags are being sold by a national agency that sells off surplus government equipment and property. The agency did not immediately return a call seeking comment. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hong Kong's leader won't resign, but is willing to talk

Call for Leung to step down. Police warn of serious consequences if protesters move to occupy gov't buildings

Hong Kong's embattled leader refused demands by pro-democracy protesters to resign Thursday, and instead offered talks to defuse a week of massive demonstrations that have grown into the biggest challenge to Beijing's authority since China took control of the former British colony in 1997.

The Hong Kong Federation of Students said in a statement early Friday that it planned to join the talks with the government, focused specifically on political reforms. The federation reiterated demands that Chief Executive Leung Chun-ying step down, saying he "had lost his integrity."

A wider pro-democracy group that had joined the demonstrations, Occupy Central, welcomed the talks and also insisted that Leung quit.

Occupy Central "hopes the talks can provide a turning point in the current political stalemate," it said in a statement. "However, we reiterate our view that Chief Executive Leung Chun-ying is the one responsible for the stalemate, and that he must step down."

Leung's comments came at a news conference held just minutes before the protesters' midnight deadline for him to quit.

"I will not resign," he said.

The students had threatened to surround or occupy government buildings if Leung did not step down, and the police had warned of serious consequences if the protesters carried out that threat.

Apps for spying?

The Chinese government might be using smartphone apps to spy on pro-democracy protesters in Hong Kong, a U.S. security firm said.

- The applications are disguised as tools created by activists, said the firm, Lacoon Mobile Security. It said that once downloaded, they give an outsider access to the phone's address book, call logs and more.

FireChat

Digital tools become gear for protesters

Just as protesters in Egypt depended on Twitter three years ago, the latest digital tools have become required gear for tens of thousands of people demanding democratic reforms on the streets of Hong Kong.

Many of the demonstrators are glued to the smartphone app FireChat, which lets them communicate even if cellphone networks jam or go down. The protesters just have to turn on their Bluetooth connections within 70 metres of anyone else using the app to see the messages sent by the entire chat group, creating a daisy-chain effect.

Cellphone networks and websites continue to work normally in Hong Kong, although protesters ran into slow network connections this week when trying to use their devices at the same time.

FireChat was reportedly downloaded 100,000 times by users in Hong Kong in just 24 hours earlier this week. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Steroid bust

Alberta police arrest four, seize $9.3M in drugs

Four people have been arrested in what the police say is a record seizure of illegal steroids in Canada.

Alberta Law Enforcement Response Team spokesman Mike Tucker says the four were arrested following searches of three homes and two storage lockers in Edmonton last month.

One of the homes had a full-blown, industrial steroids manufacturing laboratory and was just metres away from an elementary school.

The value of the materials is pegged at $9.3 million. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ricin-like toxin

U.K. woman convicted of buying poison

A London jury on Thursday convicted a British woman of buying poison over the Internet but cleared her of trying to kill her mother in a plot that prosecutors said was inspired by the TV show Breaking Bad.

Kuntal Patel was acquitted of attempted murder at London's Southwark Crown Court. She had been accused of slipping a ricin-like toxin into her mother Meena's cola after she was forbidden from marrying.

Prosecutors said Patel concocted the murder plot after watching an episode of Breaking Bad.

Police say almost all killed on volcano died of injuries inflicted by flying rocks

Doctors have determined that almost all of the dozens of people killed on a Japanese volcano died of injuries from being hit by rocks that flew out during its eruption, police said Thursday.

Rescuers have retrieved 47 bodies from the ash-covered summit area of Mount Ontake since Saturday's eruption.

Doctors concluded that all but one of the bodies showed signs of having been hit by volcanic boulders and rocks, Nagano prefectural police said. The other victim died of burns from inhaling hot air.

Those hit by the rocks and debris had multiple cuts and fractures, particularly in the head and the back, as well as the legs, a prefectural police official said on condition of anonymity, citing department policy. Nagano police had earlier said the victims died of "disaster," without specifying the cause.

Most of the bodies were found near Mount Ontake's summit, where many climbers were resting or having lunch. Some bodies were retrieved from a trail at a slightly lower elevation.

Experts say hikers near the summit might have been hit by rocks flying as fast as 300 kilometres per hour. Most of the ash fell in the first hour of the explosion, according to the University of Tokyo's Earthquake Research Institute.

Survivors said they fled for their lives as rocks and debris rained down on them while they struggled with hot air and ash hitting their face.

Medical experts who have examined some of the nearly 70 injured have said most had bruises, cuts and bone fractures on their back, an apparent sign they were hit by rocks flying out of the volcano. Some of the injured reportedly had damage to their lungs and other organs due to the impact of rocks hitting them. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Liberia says man who brought Ebola to U.S. lied on form

Thomas Eric Duncan.
Man travelled from Liberia to Dallas to visit relatives and fell ill on Sept. 24

Liberia plans to prosecute the airline passenger who brought Ebola into the U.S., alleging that he lied on a health questionnaire about not having any contact with an infected person, authorities said Thursday.

Neighbours in the Liberian capital of Monrovia believe Thomas Eric Duncan become infected when he helped bundle a sick pregnant neighbour into a taxi a few weeks ago and set off with her to find treatment.

The 19-year-old pregnant woman was convulsing and complaining of stomach pain, but everyone thought her problems were related to her pregnancy. She died, and in the following weeks, all of those who helped her got sick or died, neighbours said.

Duncan left Liberia on Sept. 19, flying from Brussels to Dulles airport near Washington. He then boarded a flight for Dallas-Fort Worth, and arrived the next day. He started feeling ill four or five days later.

How it spreads

- Ebola is introduced into the human population through close contact with the blood, secretions, organs or other bodily fluids of infected animals. It then spreads through human-to-human transmission via direct contact (through broken skin or mucous membranes) with the blood, secretions, organs or other bodily fluids of infected people, and with surfaces and materials (such as bedding and clothing) contaminated with these fluids.
- Symptoms of the disease include fever, muscle pain, vomiting and bleeding, and can appear as long as 21 days after exposure to the virus.
- Ebola is not contagious until symptoms begin.

Dr. Gil Mobley, a Missouri doctor, walks to Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport to check in and board a plane dressed in full protection gear Thursday. He was protesting what he called mismanagement of the crisis by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Awaiting test results

Patient in Toronto may have Ebola

A patient in Toronto is being tested for Ebola, but a hospital official says it's very unlikely the person has the virus.

A spokeswoman for the University Health Network, which consists of four hospitals, says the patient had a fever and a travel history from West Africa. Gillian Howard says the test has been ordered as a precaution. She says the patient is in isolation and the health workers are using protective gear until the test results have returned.

There have been several people tested in Canada for Ebola in the past several weeks, but none have had the virus. Ebola's symptoms are similar to a number of other illnesses. The tests on the Toronto patient must be sent to the National Microbiology Lab in Winnipeg.

Was A&F 'look policy' discriminatory? Top U.S. court will decide

Abercrombie & Fitch.
U.S. Supreme Court to decide if case of Muslim woman denied a job due to her headscarf was discriminated against

Other cases

Abercrombie & Fitch has settled two other discrimination lawsuits over the same issue. A&F changed its "look policy" four years ago to allow its workers to wear hijabs.

The U.S. Supreme Court said Thursday it will consider whether retailer Abercrombie & Fitch discriminated against a Muslim woman who was denied a job because her headscarf conflicted with the company's dress code, which the clothing chain has since changed.

The justices agreed to hear the Obama administration's appeal of a lower court decision that ruled the New Albany, Ohio-based company did not discriminate because the job applicant did not specifically say she needed a religious accommodation.

At issue is how employers must deal with laws that require them to make allowances for a worker's religious practices, as long as doing so does not cause the business too much hardship.

A federal judge initially sided with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which sued on behalf of Samantha Elauf. The agency alleged Elauf wasn't hired at a Tulsa, Okla., store because her hijab violated Abercrombie's "look policy," described at the time as a "classic East Coast collegiate style."

But the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that decision. The appeals court said Elauf never directly informed her interviewer she needed a religious accommodation, even though she was wearing the headscarf during her interview.

Abercrombie, which has faced slumping sales and could face negative publicity in the case, has pressed on with its defence, saying it was Elauf's obligation to explain any special needs based on her religion.

In their brief for the EEOC, government lawyers said the appeals court ruling undercuts legal protection for religious practices because it unfairly places the entire burden on the job applicant to raise the issue. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Harper. Federal deficit now to be $5.2B

The federal deficit for the last fiscal year is expected to come in at $5.2 billion — well below earlier forecasts, Prime Minister Stephen Harper said Thursday.

The government had projected a deficit of $16.6 billion for 2013-14 in the last budget, but it's expected to be about a third of that, he told members of two board of trades in Brampton, Ont.

"The government has no plan or no intention to move this year into a surplus," Harper said in a presentation ahead of a moderated question-and-answer session.

"We continue to intend to run a small deficit this year before returning to surplus."

The rest of the figures remain unchanged from the estimates made in February's budget: a $2.9-billion shortfall in the 2014-15 fiscal year then climbing to a $6.4-billion surplus the following year, he said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian universities slip in global rankings

Canadian universities are slipping in a global ranking based on learning environment, research, innovation and other performance indicators.

Eight Canadian universities made the top 200 in the Times Higher Education ranking, and of those, only one — the University of Toronto — held its position at No. 20.

Another, the University of Victoria, jumped into the top 200 at number 173.

The organization uses 13 criteria to evaluate and rank eligible universities.

Schools are excluded if they don't teach undergraduates, if they have too narrow a focus or if their research output was fewer than 1,000 articles between 2009 and 2013.

While American universities still dominate the list, they are also losing ground as Asia's leading universities continue their steady climb.

The other Canadian universities to crack the top 200 are the University of British Columbia, McGill, McMaster, the University of Montreal, the University of Alberta and the University of Ottawa. THE CANADIAN PRESS

1 Where's the beef? Wednesday kicked off Vegetarian Awareness Month. The North American Vegetarian Society wants to educate us about the benefits of a meat-free diet, and I want to learn, but I am repeatedly distracted by the unusually short lines at Burger King.

2 Off-duty. German labour minister Andrea Nahles commissioned a study of work-related tension following a union-proposed anti-stress act. The law would forbid employers from contacting workers after hours, including via email or text. Results of the study could expedite the motion and break new ground in work-life balance. At the very least, it will mean a marked improvement for those who hate their jobs.

3 Puck Stop. NHL hockey is back with epic national rivalries: Edmonton jawing at Winnipeg fans, Calgarians scoffing at Vancouver followers, and Montreal and Toronto fans exchanging words in two languages, while spouses of hockey buffs exchange no words at all.

4 Praise Potter. Christian mommy blogger Grace Ann has rewritten Harry Potter, saying she's happy her kids are reading, but she doesn't want them "turning into witches!" Now, we're obviously all concerned with the growing threat of kids turning into witches, so I support her Hogwarts School of Prayer and Miracles book. It's time we taught our children not to believe in magic, rather to put their faith in ... miracles?

5 Last impression. Larry Frazer's funeral was cancelled by a volunteer at St. Patrick Church in Saskatoon, who disliked the obit photo showing the deceased wearing a Sons of Anarchy T-shirt and a mohawk. Daughter Cheryl Stinson suspects the volunteer thought Larry was a gang member, saying they "do not want his kind here." The church later apologized and said, "If we were paying him, we'd fire him."

6 Spoiler alert. NBC's Blacklist is back for Season 2 with a familiar name appearing as one of Reddington's many frenemies. Paul Reubens, a.k.a. Pee-wee Herman, will play Mr. Vargas. James Spader's Reddington character will retain his trademark guile and clever misdirection, only in this case ambiguous insults will be met with "Nah-nuh-nah-nuh, I know you are but what am I?"

7 A la mode. Karl Lagerfeld ignited social media portals by re-creating Paris boulevard for Chanel's extravagant show at Paris fashion week. The pageantry culminated with all the models marching out, picketing in a mock feminist protest. Because let's face it: Nothing screams feminism louder than 50 model-waifs with body-image issues in outrageously priced couture.

8 Listen up. Spotify, the largest global streaming music service, finally launched in Canada, and has aligned itself with most of our national labels to provide a comprehensive catalogue of Anglo- and Franco-Canadian music. Ahead of the curve when the industry was battling illegal downloading, these guys just said, "Why own when you can rent?" and simply provided the platform that offers subscribers access to more than 20 million songs any time, anywhere. But then, what do I know? I'm still trying to burn my records onto CDs.

Circus show inspired by Metropolis, Kafka

It's a life that has for generations symbolized freedom, release from the humdrum of the everyday, the strictures of expectation.

Unlike most people, though, running away to join the circus is a reality for the performers in French-Canadian dance company Cirque Eloize.

Their new show Cirkopolis, on now at the Sydney Opera House, deploys circus and dance to tell the story of an office worker stuck in a grey existence who begins to explore the city around him in very physical ways.

"It's a metaphor, the idea of placing the main character at the beginning just working in his office — but then, throughout the entire show, contaminating his environment with his poetry, showing how ways of interacting and smiling at people can change an entire reality," explains Cirque Eloize artistic director Jeannot Painchaud, who is also the show's creator. DAILYTELEGRAPH.COM

Metaphor

The circus arts, the show's creator believes, are the perfect disciplines to explore questions of individuality and self-expression.

Synopsis

This prequel to The Conjuring proves you can't keep a good doll down. It tells the story of Annabelle, that movie's creepy, possessed doll, before she was safely locked away. The story begins in the late 1960s with a gift from John (Ward Horton) to his expectant wife Mia (Annabelle Wallis). He buys her Annabelle, a seemingly harmless vintage doll, decked out in a lace wedding dress. Their quiet peace is broken by a home invasion, and although they survive, strange things start happening in the wake of the attack and it looks like Annabelle has something to do with it.

Annabelle. The creepy doll is back, but it's the everyday sounds and objects that are the most frightening in this prequel to The Conjuring

Richard: Mark, Annabelle is like a haunted-house attraction at Halloween. There's nothing truly soul-scorchingly scary inside, but it will give you a few good jolts.

It's part psychological drama, part paranormal activity and is filled with good weird atmosphere, but where The Conjuring had the benefit of two strong leads in Vera Farmiga and Patrick Wilson, Annabelle's stars, Wallis and Horton, aren't very compelling.

She put me in the mind of Sharon Tate, which is appropriate for the time and story, and Horton reminded me of … nothing much at all. More interesting leads might have made me care more about the story.

Were you scared?

Mark: Yes I was, Richard, more from the expert filmmaking than what the actors brought to the picture.

The director uses a lot of unusual camera angles and unexpected cuts to raise the suspense. And unlike so many horror movies that take place in dark, decrepit mansions, this one is bathed in light and uses a lot of California pastels.

The story is familiar, but the look of the movie kept me off-balance.

But it owes a big debt to Rosemary's Baby, which you hinted at in referencing Tate, who was married to Roman Polanski. Horton looks a lot like John Cassavetes, the plot involves children and satanic cults, and the couple lives in a penthouse. Do I make a decent case?

RC: It definitely has echoes of Rosemary's Baby and I'd add in a taste of Repulsion in there as well.

The actors may be milquetoasty, but the movie's low-key eerie atmosphere isn't. Director John R. Leonetti amps up the tension but without the use of computer-generated special effects. Instead he relies on silence and everyday sounds to make your skin crawl.

The self-operating sewing machine from Hell and Satan's popcorn are effectively used in a movie that may be the quietest horror film ever made.

MB: Yes, the movie is very good at making inanimate objects spooky.

I also never thought of Cherish by The Association as being a scary song, but it's just another example of how Leonetti twists conventions in this otherwise conventional movie.

The part of the film that least impressed me was Annabelle herself. Not to malign the doll, but she's no Bride of Chucky.

RC: She's no Barbie either! She's simply the prop that will allow producers to string together a series of prequels and sequels based on devil doll lore.

Possessed or not, I'm guessing she works cheaper than the human actors.

MB: Wait! Barbie as devil doll! Talk about rebranding! Let's get the pitch ready...

Counting Hollywood's best Draculas

Dracula Untold.
In honour of the release of the latest riff on Bram Stoker's famous bloodsucker, Metro looks at some legendary interpretations of the Transylvanian terror

CHRIS ALEXANDER
scene@metronews.ca

As Dracula Untold, Hollywood's latest mining of author Bram Stoker's oft-plundered novel Dracula, prepares to sink its gore-hungry teeth into the box office, Metro staked out five classic incarnations of the undead Count, the likes of which stand as the benchmark in which all other Dracula's must be measured. And while the quality of actor Luke Evan's riff on Romanian Prince Vlad Tepes and his eventual re-christening as Count Dracula is yet to be determined, it is unlikely he'll mark the screen as deeply as these actors have…

Max Shreck as Nosferatu CONTRIBUTED

Max Shreck, Nosferatu (1922)
Creeping out of the high-contrast shadows captured by German auteur F.W. Murnau's expressionist lens, Shreck's Count Orlock (an unauthorized incarnation of Dracula), with his bald head, tufts of white hair framing his pointed ears and rat fangs, is still as frightening and shocking a physical presence today as he was almost a century ago. Murnau's masterpiece was ordered destroyed after Stoker's widow sued but several prints were stashed and unearthed decades later.

Bela Lugosi, Dracula (1931)
Hungarian actor Bela Lugosi was the screen's first official Dracula, in Tod Browning's adaptation of the Dracula stage play by Hamilton Deane. Lugosi's round face, hammy, phonetic-English line deliveries and woeful lack of fangs have ensured that his Count hasn't aged particularly well, but his is perhaps the screen's most famous Drac and his visage the one that has long defined pop culture's ideal of Dracula.

Luke Evans stars in Dracula Untold, which opens next Friday. CONTRIBUTED

Christopher Lee, Horror of Dracula (1958)
U.K.'s Hammer Studios rebirthed Stoker's blood-sucking nobleman via actor Christopher Lee in this classic, full-colour and full-blooded horror classic. Lee's Count is a tall, handsome and athletic presence, erotic and, in choice hissing, fang-bearing moments, terrifying. Horror of Dracula's international success compelled Hammer to produce a series of Dracula pictures, most of which starred Lee as an increasingly marginalized presence. But none of the sequels came close to capturing the energy and power of this, director Terrence Fisher's most famous work.

Jack Palance, Dracula (1973)
Dark Shadows' mastermind Dan Curtis kept on his vampire thread with this TV movie starring veteran tough-guy actor Palance as an ultra-masculine monster, haunted by his lost love while marauding around London looking for blood. Incredibly faithful to Stoker's novel, this deft adaptation showcases Palance at his intimidating best and is widely recognized as one of the best vampire films ever made.

Klaus Kinski, Nosferatu The Vampyre (1979)
German arthouse auteur Werner Herzog opted to remake Murnau's iconic original film starring his onscreen muse, madman actor Klaus Kinski (Aguirre, The Wrath of God) and the resulting picture and central performance is breathtaking. Kinski's Dracula is just as terrifying as Shreck's but there's a haunted quality to him, a melancholy and tragic aura that makes us empathize with his wretched loneliness, even while he drains the world and spreads black plague via an army of rats. Kinski may have been clinically insane, but Herzog knew how to channel that intensity and sculpt something magnificent. One of the best Dracula films ever made.

Vera Farmiga stars in The Judge, which opens next Friday. CONTRIBUTED

The Judge.
Vera Farmiga shares what it's like to work opposite the freewheeling Robert Downey Jr.

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Vera Farmiga joins an incredible cast with a very deep bench in The Judge, playing the high school sweetheart of Robert Downey Jr.'s Hank, a hotshot lawyer and prodigal son who returns home to defend his father (Robert Duvall) in court.

The cast in this is kind of ridiculous.
I know, I know. It's first class. It's what you ache for as an actor, to be surrounded by greatness. Because it lifts your game. And you learn, and you want to watch them, you respect them so much. They may seem daunting, but if there's any skittishness or nerves you get over it very quickly because of their sensibilities as human beings. They're very approachable. They're very open, they're humble. I spent more time with Downey than I did with Duvall, and yeah he's this uber-rock star, but he's got a real sense of vulnerability and openness — and even insecurity at times. You know that mega-persona? You don't feel that when you meet them. And I think what makes them great actors is they're storytellers. It's not about them, it's about telling the best possible story.

You're no slouch yourself, though.
I guess not, I've got a couple notches on my belt as well. I don't know, this is what you hunger for.

Not that Downey is tough to be around, but you two have some great chemistry.
It's not something that just happens — it can be, but I think it is a skill that you hone, which comes from listening to each other, provoking each other, responding.

How does one provoke Robert Downey Jr.?
Surprises — he likes surprises. Improvisation actually scares me. I prefer scripted improvisation. When the camera is off, I don't mind tooling around and then taking what works in that improvised rehearsal and then scripting it. But he's so loose, so carefree, so inventive that it's really challenging in a scene. He doesn't like repeating moments.

I was offended on your character's behalf when he assumed you were still a waitress when you had in fact bought the restaurant.
Yeah, that's fun, huh? Sure, he comes, thinks he's hot s—. Big city lawyer, nothing's changed. He's got his head so far up his own ass that he flat-out doesn't inquire.
It's all about Hank.

Comedian goes for guts and glory

Lady Parts. Andrea Martin discusses battle with bulimia, flying on a trapeze in new book

Here's a tip for the next time you bump into Andrea Martin: Don't forget to spit out your gum.

It turns out she suffers from misophonia — the dislike of small, irritating common noises, such as magazine pages turning or water dripping. Or gum chewing. But she's way too polite to be nasty about it.

The Tony- and Emmy-winning comedian reveals that and plenty more in her book Andrea Martin's Lady Parts, a series of essays that discuss her childhood, her career and a slightly mad devotion to her hairdresser.

Among the other revelations: She battled bulimia. She's scared of heights. She had a 28-year-old lover when she was 57. She keeps tubes of makeup forever. And there's one truly shocking confession: She's not Canadian.

Martin was born in Portland, Maine, and fell in love with Canada during a visit in 1970.

In her book, Martin, 67, talks about being on SCTV alongside the likes of Eugene Levy, John Candy and Catherine O'Hara, and what it was like to be in Pippin on Broadway.

You come clean about not being Canadian in this book?
I do! I actually feel like I have the personality of a Canadian, which is self-effacing and apologetic. I guess maybe that's why I fit in there. I never meant to lie. People with television sets propelled me into the lie. I kept it going.

Shocking confession

"I actually feel like I have the personality of a Canadian."
Andrea Martin comes clean about not being Canadian

It's less a memoir than a collection of stories, right?
They said explicitly, 'We don't want a memoir.' That was a relief because I couldn't remember even my middle name so I can't possibly write a memoir. But I can write about squirrels in my attic because that happened five minutes ago.

Was there anything that was hard to write?
Yes, the piece on bulimia. I started writing it and it poured out of me. I wouldn't be able to talk about myself without addressing that because it was such a big part of my life. Really, it was for my sons. I thought, 'How could I possibly be hypocritical in my desire for them to be authentic when I can't be?'

In Pippin, you attacked a trapeze like a trained acrobat. Did you astonish yourself by what you could do?
I think it's great to surprise yourself all the time, but that's not what fuelled me. Really what fuelled me was the pure joy of being in a circus ensemble, something I'd dreamed of all my life. I've always been fascinated by the darker side of the circus — the sideshows, the world that Federico Fellini creates. I studied mime in Paris, for God's sake! I was just so joyful that I got to live out a fantasy.

One chapter you seem to have had the hardest time writing was about SCTV. Why?
My biggest barrier was my sense of responsibility to my cast mates. I wanted to represent them in a truthful way. And part of me wanted to keep it private. It was such a unique time. We were on our own, underground, creating 17 hours a day in these studios in Edmonton. We relied on one another and it almost felt like an intrusion to now welcome other groups of people in. I wanted to keep it special.

Orange is the New Black. Despite success, author does regret her crime

The woman whose bestselling prison memoir has been adapted into the Orange is the New Black Netflix series is sharing her insight into the upcoming Season 3, saying it "holds some really amazing stories and twists and turns."

Piper Kerman said the new season will feature backstories for some characters and the emergence of very intriguing new characters. The show, created by Jenji Kohan, is about a woman serving time in a federal prison for carrying a suitcase stuffed with drug money to her ex-girlfriend.

Kerman is a consultant on the show, reading scripts and offering her advice on how to make it realistic. But she did not offer any inside scoop on when Season 3 will be available, and even laughed when asked if V, one of the main antagonists, is still alive.

"One of the things that Jenji Kohan has said about Season 3 already on record is that an exploration of faith is a big part of what she is planning, and what they have scripted so far," Kerman said Tuesday.

Kerman also commented on a book deal signed by her former lover and friend Cleary Wolters, whose involvement in drug trafficking led to her imprisonment.

Piper Kerman, author of Orange is the New Black. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I expect that my ex-lover's book will be a fascinating read," Kerman said. "She's had a very different life, and her story is very different from mine. For one thing, she was much more involved in narcotics trafficking, and, for the other thing, she served a lot more time in prison than I did."

Although Kerman has done very well for herself, she said she would change her story in a heartbeat if she could go back to when it all began, in 1993, when she was 22 years old.

"I absolutely regret my crime," said Kerman, an advocate for reforms of the criminal justice system. "I think that while I'm so grateful to have found readers and I'm thrilled with the Netflix show, the truth of the matter is that prison is a deeply traumatic experience."

Kerman spent 13 months in a federal prison in Connecticut, just over a decade ago, for her role in a money-laundering and drug-trafficking ring.

"The truth is that I caused my family and the people that love me most a great deal of pain and worry," she said. "And the other fundamental truth is my actions caused other harm, in terms of other people's substance abuse and addiction."

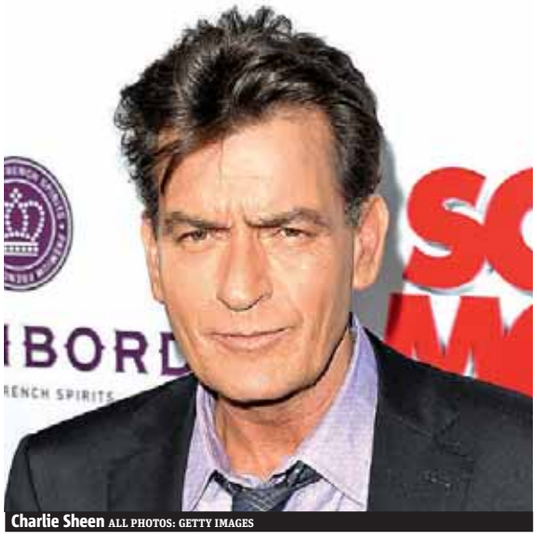
OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES



Charlie Sheen ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

Charlie Sheen armed to the teeth for dental appointment gone wrong

Nobody likes going to the dentist, but this is ridiculous. Charlie Sheen is reportedly being investigated for claims of assault with a deadly weapon after a dental appointment went awry, according to Radar Online.

Sheen brought his own dentist along with him for a procedure on an abscess but apparently had a change of heart about the man, as the Anger Management star supposedly pulled a knife on him. He also lashed out at a female dental technician when she tried to administer nitrous oxide, which just doesn't sound like Sheen at all.

Sheen's bodyguard reportedly informed the dentist that the actor had been under the influence of an illicit substance at the time of the incident. You know, the usual.

Amanda Bynes

Bynes didn't flunk out ... school gave her the boot

Speaking of erratic behaviour, new details are emerging about the ignoble end of Amanda Bynes' tenure at L.A.'s Fashion Institute of Design and Marketing. A fellow student tells TMZ that Bynes showed signs of trouble for a while, including ditching classes, being clearly high when she did bother to show up and paying other students to do her homework.

The website now reports that Bynes not so much flunked out of the school as was kicked out, with a recent incident in which she was caught cheating on a test being the last straw.

Charlize takes diva rep out for another spin

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Maybe Charlize Theron should just stick to using a personal trainer. After making headlines this summer for diva behaviour at a SoulCycle spin class, including being rude to Tia Mowry, the Oscar-winner has reportedly moved to a new workout location — but her attitude hasn't changed.

"She always arrives late to class with a scowl on her face and has the nerve to ask people who are already settled on their bikes to switch," a spin classmate at West Hollywood's Crunch gym tells In Touch of Theron. "She always causes a scene. People know to steer clear of her."

Again, why is someone of Theron's stature and fame even taking classes like this if they cause her such clear displeasure? Isn't the whole point of being rich and famous that you don't have to mix with the normals?

But, in Ms. Theron's defence, I'd challenge this anonymous source on the scowling. Of course she's scowling. It's a spin class. You're telling me you're excited to be there?

Jason Sudeikis

Hollywood gives Angry Birds their best slingshot

Is Angry Birds still a thing? Hollywood certainly hopes so, as the film version of the biggest mobile game of 2012 is rolling forward. In fact, Jason Sudeikis, Bill Hader, Maya Rudolph and Peter Dinklage have all signed on to voice characters in the animated film adaptation, according to the Hollywood Reporter. But hey, at least Angry Birds is a fresher idea than a Tetris movie, which was just announced. Maybe Hollywood is finally ready for my gritty adaptation of the game Minesweeper.

Meatballs: The original spaghetti topper

Back to basics. This version of the Italian fave can be made ahead

This recipe serves four. COURTESY RICARDOCUISINE.COM

The secret to a successful supper? Just add meatballs!

This version is ultra-tasty and, even better, can be made ahead and stored in the freezer. It is perfect to pull out on an extra-hectic evening.

Meatballs

1. With the rack in the middle position, preheat the oven to 450 F (230 C). Line a baking sheet with aluminum foil. Oil lightly. Set aside.

2. In a large bowl, combine bread crumbs and milk. Set aside.

3. In a saucepan over medium heat, soften the leek, garlic, pepper flakes and fennel in the oil for about 10 minutes. Pour into the bowl with the bread crumb mixture. Let cool. Add the meat and egg and mix thoroughly. Season with salt and pepper. Shape into four large meatballs and place on the prepared baking sheet. Bake for 35 to 40 minutes or until the meatballs are cooked through and golden brown. If needed, finish cooking under the broiler, about 2 or 3 minutes.

Tomato Sauce

1. Meanwhile, in a skillet, brown the garlic in the oil. Add the strained tomatoes. Cook for about 5 minutes or until the sauce thickens. Remove the garlic. Season with salt and pepper. Add the basil and meatballs.

Spaghetti

1. In a large pot of salted boiling water, cook the spaghetti al dente. Drain and toss with a little sauce.

2. When ready to serve, divide the spaghetti among four plates. Make a cavity in the centre of the pasta. Top with a large meatball, add the remaining sauce and sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese. FOLLOW RICARDO ON SOCIAL MEDIA AND ON RICARDOCUISINE.COM OR SUBSCRIBE TO HIS MAGAZINE'S UP-COMING ENGLISH EDITION, WHICH LAUNCHED THIS SEPTEMBER!

Ingredients

Meatballs
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) Japanese panko bread crumbs
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) milk
- 1 cup (250 ml) finely chopped leek
- 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) crushed red pepper flakes, or to taste
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) fennel seeds, ground
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) olive oil
- 1 lb (454 g) ground meat mixture (veal, beef and pork)
- 1 egg, lightly beaten
- Salt and pepper

Tomato Sauce
- 1 clove garlic, lightly crushed
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil
- 2 1/2 cups (625 ml) strained tomatoes (or canned crushed tomatoes)
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) chopped basil

Spaghetti
- 3/4 lb (375 g) spaghetti
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese

Liquid Assets

Dear modern whiskey lovers

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Once the tipple of older men in smoking jackets, whiskey has attracted a much wider audience over the last few years as more countries produce it.

While this modern breed of whiskey lover can be as snobby as his wine counterparts, as a group, whiskey aficionados helped elevate one style in particular to superstar status.

I'm talking American bourbon: a spirit made with at least 51 per cent corn and a favourite of the mint julep-sipping residents of the southern states.

The term bourbon can be used by any American whiskey producer in the U.S. Most don't, allowing the distillers in Kentucky (where it originated) some exclusivity to the name.

It used to be considered a second-tier spirit, but not anymore. Today, releases of rare limited editions are commonplace and selection, especially here in Canada, has never been more vibrant.

Knob Creek Bourbon Whiskey ($44.49 - $49.95) is made in small batches aged for nine years. Deep, robust and oaky, it's best served neat or with a touch of spring water.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

The not-so-meaty meatballs

Ingredients

- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- 1/2 tsp (2.5 ml) crushed red pepper flakes
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) quinoa
- 3/4 cup (180 ml) vegetable broth
- 1 can (19 oz/540 ml) chickpeas, rinsed and drained
- 3 slices white bread, cubed
- 1 cup (250 ml) grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) pitted oil-packed Kalamata olives, drained and chopped
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) parsley, chopped
- Salt and pepper
- Flour
- Olive or canola oil, for cooking

1. In saucepan, soften onion and garlic with pepper flakes in oil. Add quinoa and broth and bring to boil. Cover and simmer 15 minutes or until the broth is completely absorbed.

2. In food processor, purée chickpeas until smooth with quinoa mixture and bread. Stir in remaining ingredients. Season with salt and pepper.

3. With lightly oiled hands, shape each meatball with about 1 tbsp (15 ml) of the chickpea mixture. Place on a floured baking sheet and coat them with flour. Set aside.

4. In a large skillet, heat about 1/2 inch (1 cm) of oil and brown the meatballs, a third at a time, for 2 to 3 minutes. Keep warm on a baking sheet with a wire rack. Serve warm or at room temperature as an hors d'oeuvre. RICARDO

Make it an autumn for everyone

Have some fun this season. Take advantage of the mild weather and cross these activities off your list

Visiting a pumpkin patch is an excursion the entire family can enjoy. SHUTTERSTOCK

While most Canadians have a love/hate relationship with winter, fall is known for its vibrancy and beauty. But for those who see the falling leaves and changing colours as a prelude to the cold to come, here are some ways to ward off the winter blues, before they have even hit.

"While it's great to go to a gym or play hockey, we have a country filled with beautiful natural resources to enjoy," said Katherine Janson, the director of communications and public affairs for ParticipACTION, a non-profit organization that promotes physical activity. "Go for a hike, go for a walk with family — it all counts as activity and it's a great opportunity to take advantage of the great outdoors."

Take in the scenery: Across most regions of Canada, the fall season changes the Great White North, temporarily, into a picturesque landscape of oranges, reds, and yellows, as leaves turn and fall. Whether you go for a drive in the country, or wander through your neighbourhood picking richly coloured leaves to press, these are ways to unite with nature.

Visit the fair: For communities large and small, fall is a time where harvest fairs gear up. Some offer midway rides, others focus on food and dancing. Whatever the case, it's a wonderful way to enjoy the bounty of the season with friends, family and the community, at large.

Farm fun: In some parts of the country, corn mazes are all the rage, in other areas, pumpkin patches abound. And don't forget about the apple picking.

'Leaf' your worries behind: Sure, those leaves are falling, but that doesn't mean you have to stop enjoying them. Many of us fondly remember the joy of jumping into a freshly raked pile of leaves, so why stop now? Ditch the rake for a few minutes and take a leap in with, or without, the kids.

What to do in Ottawa

- Champlain Lookout in Gatineau Park provides a spectacular view of the Ottawa Valley's changing colours. It is atop the Eardley Escarpment, 335 metres above sea level, providing a view of the Canadian Shield and the St. Lawrence Lowlands.
- Saunders Farm is a 100-acre farm with a selection of 10 hedge mazes. Haunting Season 2014 runs until Nov. 2 with various family-friendly fall activities.
- The Ottawa Wine and Food Festival runs from Nov. 6-9 at the Ottawa Convention Centre.

Canada's Thanksgiving weekend is also Columbus Day weekend in the U.S., which equals major sales. SHUTTERSTOCK

Long weekend. Think outside the box

The last long weekend of the year is coming up — a final opportunity to kick back and enjoy an extra day of fun and relaxation between now and the holiday season.

So what can you do to make those three days extra special? Here are two great ideas from Katie Bugbee, senior managing editor and global parenting expert for Care.com, for last-minute escapes this Thanksgiving weekend:

Head off for one last camping trip: Sure, it may be a little cool, but you can bundle up with extra blankets and a roaring fire. It's a spectacular way to experience fall's colours by day and toast up some marshmallows by moonlight.

Plan a shopping extravaganza: The holidays will be here before you know it, so why not head off on a shopping excursion? Whether you boot it across town or across the border, it's a great time to search out some great long-weekend specials — or start brainstorming ideas to tick off the holiday shopping list.

Redblacks hope to land on their feet

Last versus last.
Sporting four straight losses, Bombers visit the one-win Redblacks

Mired in a nine-game losing streak, the Ottawa Redblacks can't be blamed for feeling desperate for a win.

While players and coaches will say they've come close and they're doing good things, the losing streak is taking its toll. Ottawa's one and only victory (1-11) came way back on July 18 against the Toronto Argonauts.

Two weeks ago the Redblacks suffered a heartbreaking 35-32 overtime loss to the Saskatchewan Roughriders despite having the lead for much of the game. Last week the Redblacks had to deal yet again with disappointment when they were unable to take advantage of what looked like perfect scoring situations and settled for a 15-7 loss to Montreal.

Losing is wearing thin, and not just for Ottawa. This week the Redblacks host the Winnipeg Blue Bombers (6-7) who are dealing with their own four-game losing streak.

"The next game's the biggest game for us," said head coach Rick Campbell.

"We're scratching and clawing to get wins just like everybody else does."

Campbell says he can't allow his team to look at the Bombers as an easy target.

"We're focused on ourselves," Campbell said. "We think we have a big future ahead of us here. We're working hard every day to get better and we respect all the people we play and there's a lot of good teams in this league and Winnipeg's no different. They've done a lot of great things this year and we're going to have our hands full, but we're going to focus on us and playing the best football we can."

Still, Campbell acknowledged that the losses have taken their toll on the group.

"We're hanging in there, but it's tough," Campbell said. "It's tough to lose games and tough to lose close games, but we think we have a lot of right parts to our team here and our guys have the right attitude, but we know we have to work hard and get better as fast as we can and start winning some of these close games."

What does bode well for the Redblacks this Friday is the way the defence has played at TD Place. It hasn't allowed a touchdown on home field in three of the last four games.

"We've done really well on defence so far, but we still need to do better," said defensive lineman Keith Shologan.

Week 15 pick

Bombers at Redblacks, Friday, 7 p.m.

A key contest for two teams clinging to playoff hopes. Ottawa (1-11) is last in the East Division having dropped nine straight, including a 36-28 road decision to Winnipeg on July 3. The Bombers have lost their last four games and are last in the West Division. Henry Burris remains with Ottawa despite an inquiry from Saskatchewan about a potential trade for the veteran quarterback. Winnipeg quarterback Drew Willy threw for 303 yards and a TD in last weekend's 16-11 loss to Hamilton, just missing out on leading the Bombers to a second comeback win over the Ticats. Ottawa's biggest issue this season is an offence that's last in scoring (16 points per game) and second-last in total yards (294.3).

Pick — Winnipeg.

Fury fly to Texas on a wind of confidence

Fresh off their first victory at TD Place, the Ottawa Fury travel to Texas to take on the San Antonio Scorpions on Saturday.

Under Canadian head coach Alan Marcina, a win could clinch a spot for San Antonio in the NASL postseason, pending results in other games.

The Fury have three wins in their last four games. The Scorpions meanwhile have lost two of their last three.

$50.75 million. Bobby Ryan makes the big bucks with Ottawa

TREVOR GREENWAY
trevor.greenway@metronews.ca

Get used to the name Bobby Ryan, because the Ottawa Senators locked up the top-line winger Thursday to a seven-year contract extension worth $50.75 million.

Ryan said the city has "embraced" him since he was traded from Anaheim last summer and he knew right away Ottawa was a place he wanted to call home for a long time.

"We felt that we had found the place we could start a family, call home and everything that we have experienced here in the last year has hinted at all of that," said Ryan.

"Speaking from my point of view, it was almost a no-brainer for us."

Ryan had a decent season last year, notching 23 goals and 48 points in 70 games during his first year as a Senator, but with four 30-plus-goal seasons under his belt, the Senators feel Ryan will become a focal point with the club.

"Since acquiring Bobby in July of last year, we have had the opportunity to see first-hand the type of player he is on the ice, as well as his leadership and professionalism off the ice," said Senators owner Eugene Melnyk during a news conference Thursday.

"He is truly the type of player we want to build our team around."

The long-term contract will take Ryan through to the 2022 season, but it's more than just keeping him around to put pucks in the net. The signing gives the Senators a higher profile in the market as a team willing to spend bigger bucks on bigger contracts.

"We are trying to do things that show that this team is a secure team and then we just have to add to it as we go forward," said Senators GM Bryan Murray.

The Senators are still hoping to sign defenceman Marc Methot, who is entering the final year of his contract this season.

Crosby keen on new coach's style

Pittsburgh Penguins star winger Sidney Crosby. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sidney Crosby, the Penguins captain from Cole Harbour, N.S., and Mike Johnston, their new coach from nearby Dartmouth, grew up only a few minutes apart. Johnston said at his introductory news conference that his 80-year-old father still plays hockey at Cole Harbour Place and that coaching one of Nova Scotia's best was exciting for his family.

But the style of play Johnston hopes to get the Penguins used to will be hundreds of kilometres away from what outgoing Dan Bylsma preached.

No longer will the Penguins be such a risk-reward team in the middle of the ice, as Johnston wants his players to "own the puck (because) you play defensively a lot less."

Crosby doesn't mind that theory.

"I think that's kind of the formula for every team, that's how they want to play," he said.

"We want the puck as players, and as an offensive player that hopefully means more opportunities if that's the case."

As if Crosby needs more opportunities — last season he won his second Hart Trophy as NHL MVP with a league-leading 104 points on 36 goals and 68 assists.

"Going back (to) different experiences, change hasn't necessarily been a bad thing," he said. "Sometimes it's been a really good thing. It doesn't feel good at the time, but I think when you look at the big picture sometimes it's something that needs to happen."

Bouchard advances.
First Canadian to reach WTA final since 1989

Canada's Eugenie Bouchard qualified for the upcoming WTA Finals when seventh-seeded Angelique Kerber of Germany lost her third-round match at the China Open on Thursday.

Bouchard, who suffered an upset loss to Germany's Sabine Lisicki in the second round, locked up a berth in the season-ending tournament when Russia's Svetlana Kuznetsova completed a 2-6, 6-4, 6-3 victory over Kerber.

The Beijing tournament provided a last-ditch opportunity for players to collect qualification points for the Oct. 20-26 event in Singapore. The $6.5-million US tournament will feature the tour's top eight players.

Bouchard, from Westmount, Que., has risen to seventh in the world rankings this season. The Wimbledon finalist was the only woman to make it to at least the semi-finals at each of the year's first three Grand Slam tournaments.

She's the first Canadian to advance to the Tour final since Helen Kelesi in 1989.

In other matches Thursday, top-ranked Serena Williams recovered from a second-set lapse to defeat Lucie Safarova, 6-1, 1-6, 6-2 and No. 12-seeded Ekaterina Makarova of Russia dropped a 6-1, 0-6, 7-5 decision to Roberta Vinci of Italy.

Simona Halep of Romania won a back-and-forth match against Andrea Petkovic of Germany 7-6 (4), 5-7, 7-6 (1), then immediately withdrew from the tournament with a left hip injury.

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
A relationship needs sorting out. Be totally honest about your emotions, even if you fear it may hurt someone's feelings. How they react will tell you a lot about your long-term prospects.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
There may be many things that you could change for the better but is it worth it if, in doing so, you have to change habits and routines? Only you can decide.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
What exactly is it that you most desire? You need to be as specific as you can if you are to have any real hope of making your dream come true.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You will find yourself attracted to an idea that is unusual over the next 24 hours. That's OK. Even people as traditional as you have moments when their minds leap to a higher level.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Don't waste time worrying that what you have to say might make you unpopular. You have an important message to convey and personal feelings cannot get in the way.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You want to forgive someone who made a mistake but you know they'll likely make the same mistake again. Act tough, even though you don't feel it.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You were too critical of a partner, but it's better in this instance to say too much than to not say enough. They value your judgment, so what you said will have a positive effect.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
The best way to handle a delicate situation is to be brutal. That may sound wrong but the planets indicate you've been pussy-footing round the issue.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
If you have something to say that you suspect won't go down well with certain people, speak up before communications planet Mercury turns retrograde tomorrow.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Your feelings about a career matter are spot on, so listen to your instincts. You may be swimming against the tide of opinion but everyone will come round to your way of thinking.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You have so much good fortune in your celestial bank account. When are you going to start spending some of it? Do it now!

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Say what you mean over the next 24 hours but be careful how you say it. With Mercury starting one of its retrograde phases if others don't like your tone you could make enemies.
